

HEALTH & LIFE SCIENCES

Temple is a hub for health and life sciences with extensive capabilities rivaling those in major cities and one of the highest concentrations of healthcare professionals in Texas. In fact, more than 30% of the city's population trained and working in healthcare.

THE BEST HEALTHCARE IN CENTRAL TEXAS

At the core of Temple's health and life sciences industry is the Temple Medical and Educational District. Established in 2009 to promote future development around healthcare and colleges, some of Texas' greatest healthcare institutions are putting world-class healthcare at the fingertips of Central Texas. It has created an environment that attracts cutting edge businesses and professionals.

Tenants include Baylor Scott & White Health, the only trauma 1 center between Austin and Dallas; McLane Children's Hospital, the only children's hospital between Dallas and Austin; and the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, fourth largest in the United States.

THE WORKFORCE OF THE FUTURE

Temple's health and life sciences workforce is bolstered by a comprehensive medical education cluster, which includes Texas A&M Medical School, University of Mary Hardin Baylor, Texas A&M University—Central Texas and Temple College. The Texas Bioscience Institute, located on the Baylor Scott and White West Campus, offers a STEM based program to advanced high school students that promotes a skilled medical and biotechnology workforce.

A BREEDING GROUND FOR BIOTECH R&D

Local entrepreneurship is fostered by the Temple Health and Bioscience District, which provides early-stage biotech companies with mentoring, funding, and access to office, lab and conference space. Current tenants are developing technologies to reduce Healthcare Associated Infections, improve stroke and other cerebrovascular disease monitoring, enhance child literacy and more.
